

BOOSTERS PLAN ANOTHER TOUR

Back From Thousand-Mile Trip.
Full of Enthusiasm Over
What They Did.

CHAMBER TO HEAR ABOUT IT

Dabney Suggests Smoker So That Business Men May Be Told of Results.

Completing a tour of more than 1,000 miles through North Carolina and Virginia, the Richmond Boosters arrived home at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and immediately detained for their homes or their offices.

W. T. Dabney, business manager, repaired to his offices in the Chamber of Commerce, and later in the day stated that he would ask the chamber to give a public smoker, so that all the merchants of the city could be told, in the words of the Boosters themselves, a graphic story of the surpassing success of the trip. Both Mr. Dabney and O. Herbert Funsten, who accompanied the Boosters as acting president of the Chamber of Commerce, were emphatic in declaring this gigantic excursion into the hearts of two sister states, a graphic story of the surpassing success of the trip. Both Mr. Dabney and O. Herbert Funsten, who accompanied the Boosters as acting president of the Chamber of Commerce, were emphatic in declaring this gigantic excursion into the hearts of two sister states, a graphic story of the surpassing success of the trip.

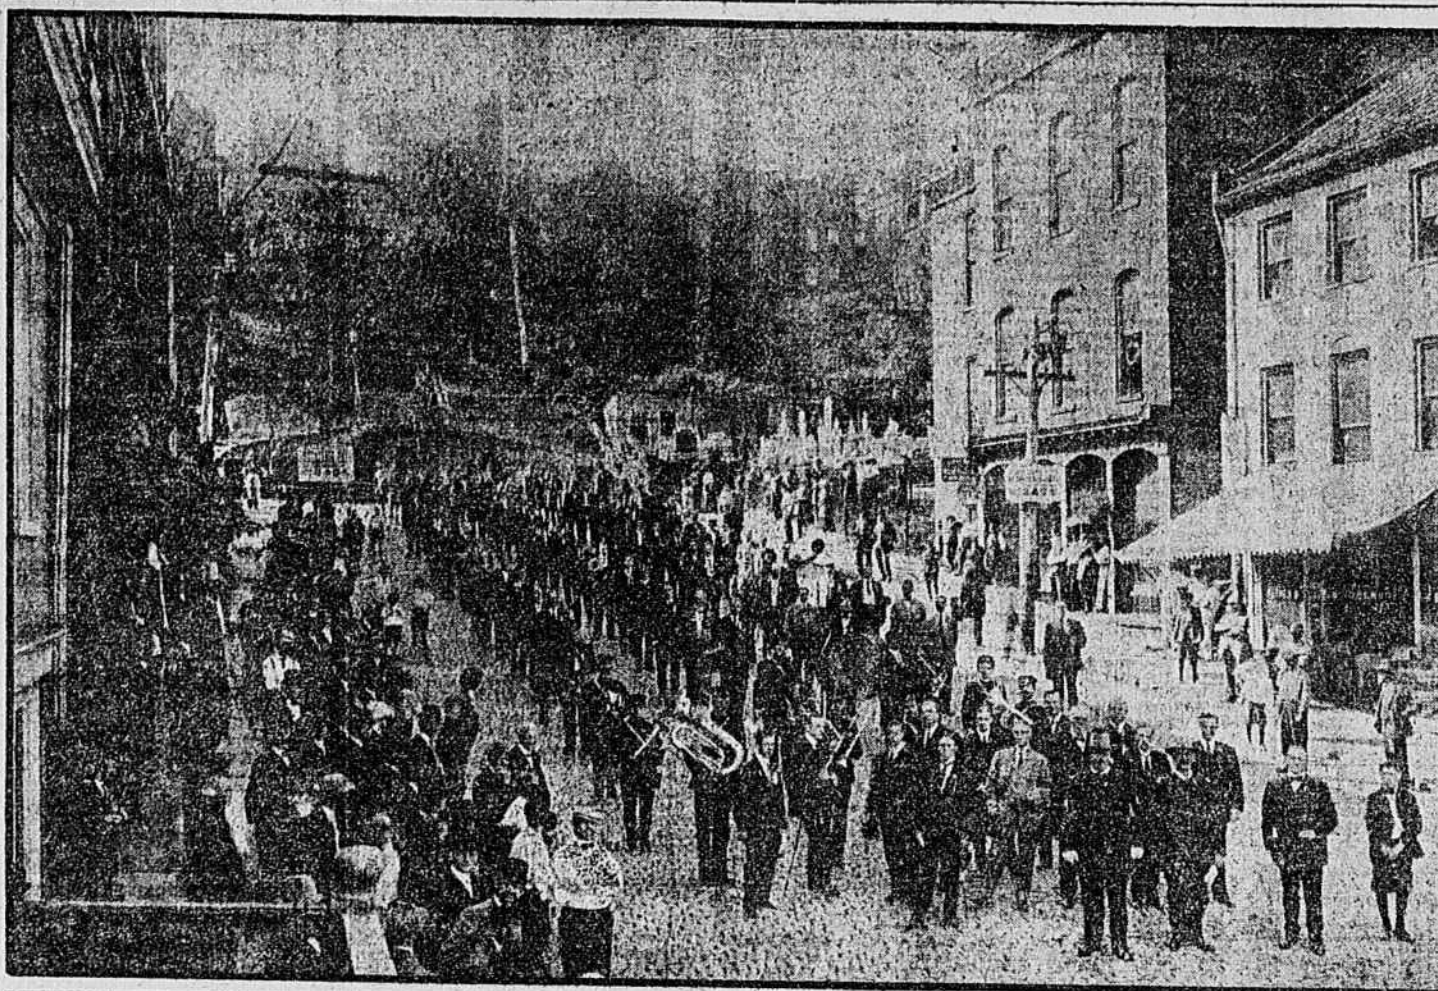

Turned Over to Chamber.
The tour was first planned by The Times-Dispatch, which at first had decided personally to conduct the tour. But it grew to such proportions that it was decided to turn the management of the boosting excursion over to the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Dabney took official charge.

More than 100 business men, all of them representatives of the biggest business firms in the city, participated, and carried with them tons of advertising matter, which was distributed all along the route. The special Pullman train stopped in a score of towns, and in every town and in every city, in every hamlet, the Boosters were received by a delegation from the business organizations, Mayors and other city officials.

Mayor D. C. Richardson accompanied the Boosters, and with Mr. Dabney, Mr. Funsten and others, was the principal speaker on all occasions where speeches were demanded and were in order. Welcome in both States could not have been more cordial nor more sincere. Richmond has always been known as a great city of the South, but interest has generally centered mainly around it because of its historic position in the making of the new South and because of the sentiment which naturally is attracted to the one-time capital city of the Confederacy. But now it is known, and is becoming to be better known, as a leading marketing place of the South, as a business center and as a central source of supply. Preaching a gospel of reciprocity and pleading for the trade much of which has hitherto gone to the marketing places of the North and West, the Richmond Boosters, as was frequently said of them, build better than they knew when they undertook and finished this trip to boost the interests of their city.

Much trade is already coming from North Carolina. It will come now threefold, if all the kind words and promises uttered by those who spoke on behalf of the cities visited are fulfilled.

Stopped at Many Cities.
Leaving here on the morning of October 2, the Boosters made their first stop in Henderson, N. C., and from there proceeded through a dozen other small towns of the Old North State, spending the night in Charlotte. Everywhere the people were ready for them. Everywhere the business representatives of Richmond met and became acquainted with the business men of other cities. They found that they had much common ground on which to stand; that their interests were mutual; that Richmond, in helping to build up herself and her own trade, would help build up cities of North Carolina, and that they, in aiding Richmond, would also be aiding themselves. So it turned out to be not merely a boosting tour for Richmond, but a boosting tour for two States and dozens of other cities. They look to Richmond to take the lead in revivifying Southern productivity and manufacturing, as she once took the lead in a struggle of arms.

They look for a marketing place in which to dispose of their products, and they look to a neighboring city to supply them with the things they need. Now they find that it is not necessary to go to Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago or Cincinnati to purchase supplies. They can buy as cheaply, with less expense of transportation, and in as fair a bargain in Richmond.

"We do not want your home trade," said the Richmond speakers. "We are not here to take away that which rightfully belongs to you. We come instead to tell you what we can do to prove to you that you can buy from us as cheaply, more cheaply in many instances, as you can in any other city in the country. We are all of the same blood and tradition, and we should all pull together in the development of our common interests and a common country. If you go elsewhere to buy, come to us, and we will treat you fairly and give you the square deal."

Surpassed Expectations.
The success of the peaceful expedition surpassed all expectations and all hopes. The Boosters were astonished at the cordiality with which they were received and at the interest which these other cities display in Richmond. On all sides were expressions of willingness to pull together, to work for a common development. The North Carolinians are willing to bring their foreign trade to Richmond. In fact, they are anxious to bring it here. "We have heard of you," said their speakers, "and we know that you have a wonderful city—a city which has made tremendous strides in recent years in assuming a position of national importance as a trading center. Now we know you better, for we are meeting with your representative business men, and we are becoming better acquainted." Successful business depends to a larger extent on mutual trust than on anything else, and mutual trust and friendship were firmly established between Richmond and the cities of North Carolina and her own State by this little trip of the Boosters.

They traveled more than 1,000 miles in a train of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, in which the service was perfect, and it is estimated that they came in contact with more than 10,000 people whom they would probably have not heard of otherwise, and who would have remembered Richmond only for its traditions of the past. But on the tour there was little reference to this historic past. The talk was on the present and the prospects of the future, and chief reference was to what Richmond has done as a commercial center and of what she expects to do as she gradually comes into her own and fulfills the promises of her founders.

All Get Acquainted.
Another important feature of the tour was the bringing together of Richmond merchants who before were not acquainted with each other. They had heard of each other, and knew that they were engaged in this business or that, but they had never met before and did not know each other. "This feature is especially important," said Mr. Funsten. "In becoming acquainted with our more distant neighbors we have become acquainted with each other, and hereafter the spirit of co-operation will be firmer and more lasting. This trip will help us to pull together as we never pulled before, for we know that what is for the benefit of one is for the good of all." And he voiced a very general sentiment.

The tour was a business one from the beginning to the end, and it resulted in a success of which the promoters did not dream when they headed for the South. They went to teach, but they learned as much as they taught. They found surprising activity and development in the cities and towns of North Carolina. They found that the Tarheel State is already taking front rank as a manufacturing State, and that its agricultural output is increasing every year. They found cotton mills and tobacco factories as large as any they had ever seen, and they saw that the North Carolinians are as alive and hustling as they themselves. And what the Tarheel people learned from the Boosters has been told. They accomplished all that they had expected, and more. The results will come, for the ties which already bound the two peoples now bind them tighter still, and the mutual co-operation and the pulling together so much sought after will come. The results will show that the Boosters' tour will bring to Richmond their own reward. Already there is talk of a tour of the same kind next year, and the delegation which leaves Richmond then will be double, or triple, the permanent recovery will result from the second operation.

Robert W. Miles, Jr., left yesterday for Springfield, Illinois, where a second operation will be performed on his hip. Mr. Miles had his hip dislocated last winter in a class football game at Davidson College. It is hoped that permanent recovery will result from the second operation.

TYRUS RAYMOND COMING TUESDAY

Cobb, Accompanied by George Mullin, Will Arrive Day Ahead of All-Stars.

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, accompanied by George Mullin, both of the Detroit team, will arrive in Richmond Tuesday morning, a full day in advance of the rest of Jimmie McLeary's All-Stars, who will battle with the Athletics at Broad Street Park on Wednesday.

The reason Tyrus is coming in advance is because of his friends. He has a host of people here who are just waiting his arrival so that they may entertain him. Of course, Mullin will come in for a part of the entertainment. It is understood that a big feast is being prepared for the visitors at the Commonwealth Club and that a number of the local fans will be invited.

Cobb has written to a friend here saying that he wouldn't miss the trip to Richmond for anything on earth, and that he would be here on time. He had to engage an aeroplane to make the trip. The Georgia Peach, despite his prowess on the diamond, is a reticent sort of an individual, and blunders under the weight of compliments like a young miss at her coming-out party.

It has not yet been announced what players will take the place of the quartet of White Sox players who will be unable to take part in the series because of a post-season series arranged between the two Chicago teams. But McLeary may be depended upon to round up the rest in the game. There are now left just above 200 reserved seats, and orders are still coming in on every mail.

N. AND W. WRECK IS FATAL TO ONE

Several Narrow Escapes From Death, Every Car Overturning.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Crewe, Va., October 5.—One of the most destructive wrecks in the history of the Norfolk and Western Railroad occurred today as No. 3, a passenger train from Norfolk, was pulling into the yard here. It is not known just how it occurred. The engine turned over and rolled down an embankment, striking the cars. Emmett Jones, and his fireman, W. Oliver, jumped and barely escaped death. Every car was overturned and the miracle is that so few passengers were hurt.

A negro man, name not known, was so badly hurt as to die on the way to the Y. M. C. A., where he was being taken.

The passengers, few in number, were transferred to another train and taken on their way.

The torn and splintered cars were lying piled one upon the other, presenting a scene seldom witnessed. The wreck car from Norfolk was sent to aid in clearing the track.

Greeney Firm in Bankruptcy.
Harry H. Hudson and Simon Damiani, doing a grocery business at 200 West Clay Street, under the firm name of Hudson & Damiani, yesterday filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the office of the clerk of the United States District Court. The firm's liabilities aggregate $1,250.25, while its assets are valued at $300. Damiani has individual liabilities of $91 and no assets, while Hudson has neither personal liabilities nor assets.

Lankford, of Richmond College, Gives Evidence of Ability at Boating.

Yesterday at Richmond College, so far as football practice is concerned, was taken up in an attempt by Coach Hosaker to develop a drop kicker and a punter. In both cases he seems likely to be successful. Lankford, the blonde back of the college, is showing a trusty toe, and from the forty-yard line dropped a number between the goal posts. A new man, whose name is kept a secret at present, was boosting the leather, and his sprays gladdened the heart of the coach.

Some apprehension was felt as to Carson, who injured his shoulder in practice Wednesday, but the big end is not seriously hurt, and will be out in a day or two, though it is practically certain that he will not be in the game with Fredericksburg College on Saturday. McNell, a third-year man at college, but a new man to football, has shown remarkable speed and football sense, and it looks now as if he is going to win out at left end. This has been the weakest feature of the eleven thus far, and if the new man can make good, it will help wonderfully in championship the team.

While the game Saturday will not be a championship affair, there is nevertheless considerable interest attached to it because of the fact that the boys from the Rappahannock held Randolph-Macon to a no-score game last Saturday. The cheering squad will be out in force to help the warriors roll up a big score.
